Our law firm, King Allen Guthrie & McHugh, has a buy-out provision for a withdrawing partner. Pursuant thereto, the withdrawing partner is compensated by payment of a fixed sum, plus his or her capital account, plus his or her share of the firm's net income to the date of withdrawal. The fixed sum is calculated on the basis of the withdrawing partner's units of participation (percentage) for a period of the firm's expected net income, based on the firm's Annual Budget.

As of the end of 1997, the value of my capital account at the firm was approximately $61,000. Based upon my 1998 percentage ownership of the firm, the value of the buy-out provision is approximately $33,000. Upon my departure from the firm, I would receive payment of that sum, plus payment of my capital account, plus payment of my share of the firm's 1998 net income to the date of withdrawal.
